

Dave Clark

Mr. Clark is recently retired from King County after a 35 year career involving a wide range of County programs and services in land and water resource management. For the past 15 years, he has served as the Manager of the Flood Hazard Reduction Services Section with the Department of Natural Resources and Parks. In this capacity he managed the provision of flood protection and flood hazard reduction services throughout the county's major river basins, which included acting as King County's Flood Emergency Director during flood emergencies and federally declared disaster events. He directed King County's participation in FEMA's Community Rating System(CRS) which evaluates local floodplain management programs against federal performance standards. King County is currently a Class 3 CRS community which is the highest rated floodplain management program of any county in the nation. In 2004, Mr. Clark was awarded the Floodplain Manager of the Year award by the Association of State Floodplain Managers(ASFPM).
